

Reginald Green

Reginald Green was born and raised in Dallas, Texas. He is a 15 -year, medically retired Navy Veteran. "Reggie" is a self-taught artist that got into art to "heal", "explore his creativity", and to do something positive and productive to shift his focus off his highly debilitating migraines, headaches, depression, and lower back pain that he acquired from his active duty service.

Reggie was a "Veteran Art Project" (VETART.org) participant and took it upon himself to learn the basics of molding, painting, and expressing himself through sculpting and various or types of art; Utilizing influences from Egyptian, Moorish, Mayan, African and other ancient civilizations/cultures that he learned from volunteering at the Casa Del Moro Museum. He was eventually hired as an VETART instructor and began teaching classes at the ASPIRE Center & The V.A. Medical Center in La Jolla, CA.

Reggie currently lives in San Diego, CA and is working out of the VETART's School of Ceramics and Glass in Vista, CA.
